

McGill Hosts to Canada's Crack Spike Stars

Letters From Paris

By David R. Fraser

(Editor's Note: This letter is the first in a series written by David R. Fraser, who was elected President of the Students' Society last year, but resigned on being awarded the Guy Drummond Scholarship in Economics, which entitles the holder to a year's study in Paris.)

Paris, October 9.—One morning not long ago, while I was enjoying a typical French breakfast of "café au lait" and "croissants," I was handed a letter from your editor.

The letter informed me that the map of Canada had not been altered in the past few months. I was indeed grateful to hear that, for the map of Europe seems to be changing rather rapidly these days! If McGill is to keep in step with recent European trends, there ought to be an early "plebiscite" on the campus so that "suppressed minorities" who wish to study could "annex" the Redpath Library immediately. This would undoubtedly prevent interfacery "complications" and "threats of force."

In his letter, your editor went on to tell me that the Daily would soon be in full swing once again. Then, after several soothing introductory remarks, he finally decided that the opportunity was ripe to ask if I could take some time off, now and then, to write a short article for the Daily.

This letter was most exquisitely worded, but it suddenly dawned on me that it was just the same old story: the Daily must again be hard up for "fourth page filler." But, say fellows, what happens to all those old clippings on "Why Professors Grow Bald," or "Why Co-eds Leave Home?"

Have they been lost, or did someone "pinch" the latest copy of "Esquire" from the Union Reading Room? This is indeed an unparalleled situation for this early in the college year; and besides, I swear that I'm not responsible for the disappearance of that Esquire. However, if it turns up again, you might be good enough to send it on when you're through with it... but "revenons a nos moutons."

France Looks on Europe.

Just a short time ago Europe was on the verge of what would unquestionably have been the most disastrous war of all time, and a war in which no one could have been victorious. During the crisis it was interesting to watch the situation unravel itself from hour to hour, and to observe the reactions of the citizens of Paris. They, of course, did not look at the crisis in the same light as we Canadians did.

To them, war would not have been in a distant land across some 2,000 miles of ocean. It would have been right at hand, and would have immediately imperilled all that they had ever lived for. Men were not going to the eastern frontier ready to die gloriously that their homes and country might be spared, for their homes and families would also be in the zone ravaged by modern warfare. It presented a ghastly outlook for all!

In this city the bright lights were a thing of the past. Even the street lights were shaded by metal covers so that only a small ray of light could be seen. Day and night heavy army transport trucks lumbered along the "boulevards" in a dull undertone. The sidewalk cafes were almost deserted, as people

TEA HOP CAPS QUEENS GAME; RAIN OR SHINE

Archie Etienne Will Again Supply Music

IN UNION BALLROOM

Special Invitation Given Kingston Supporters to Attend Dance

Doors will be thrown open to the tea dancers at the Union again this Saturday afternoon, October 22, promptly after the Queen's-McGill football game is over.

This is the third tea dance that the Union has sponsored this season, and as usual, the dancers will get inspiration from the rhythms of Archie Etienne and his orchestra. The price is one dollar a couple. The only other requisite is a will to have a good time.

It is thought by the Union that this tea dance on Saturday will afford a fine opportunity to McGill students to become acquainted with the visiting Queen's students.

LOCAL ARTISTS TO PERFORM AT MAC

Varied Programme to Be Presented Tonight by Tudor Hall Players

Students of Macdonald will be treated this year, as they have been in previous years, to a concert presented by a group of artists from Tudor Hall. The concert, which is sponsored by the Literary and Debating Society, will be held this evening at 7.15 in the Assembly Hall.

Paul Lieven, manager of Tudor Hall, will direct. Among the artists will be Warner Norman, organist of radio fame, who was appreciated by the students last year. The group will also include a soprano, a humorist, and a tenor who will sing popular songs. Students attending the concert will find that the concert has been designed to appeal to a wide range of personal tastes.

PIT NOMINATIONS

The deadline for nominations to the Pit Committee has been advanced until Saturday at 2 p.m., October 22nd. Three new members are to be elected to the Committee on Monday, when balloting will be held from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Nominations are to be signed by at least ten students, and are limited only in so far as one member of the Committee must be a woman student, and one a resident in Strathcona Hall.

Lectures Cancelled.

All regular university lectures will be cancelled tomorrow when the Intercollegiate Sports Meet will be held.

Evening lectures will not be cancelled.

Ultimate Victory for China Predicted by Lathe—Two-thirds of Chinese Universities Affected—Students Construct Own College Buildings

"The really greatest contribution of Chinese students today, in their war-torn country, is in mass education," said Dr. Grant Lathe, McGill medical graduate and member of the international student delegation which investigated conditions of university students on a ten-weeks' tour of war-affected regions of China last summer.

Dr. Lathe brought home to his large audience, in Room 250 of the Biological Building, a sharp realization of the horrors of modern warfare, as scenes from an exclusive motion picture record of the ravages and terrors wrought with such telling effect on Canton by the aerial messengers of death were shown. Special emphasis was laid on the effects of the invasion on China's universities and students, from whom Dr. Lathe brought a message of greeting to Canadian university students.

Universities Destroyed.

The universities of China were singled out as one of the first objectives of the invaders' military campaign, for it is and was within the university that the greatest resistance to domination was encountered. Fully two-thirds of the universities in the country have either been completely destroyed or badly damaged and their students displaced. As a result of this, down from the northeast and up from the south—the regions of invasion—university students marched for 2,300 miles into the southwest and interior and there constructed their own universities. The curricula of these universities have been greatly modified, containing courses in military drill and studies of the practical problems facing China and their solution.

Educational Program.

The revived national spirit and organization of guerrilla bands amongst the hitherto apathetic peasantry is striking. The main reason for this revival of national union, where provincialism was rampant, is attributable to the mass education program being carried on by the university students who are attempting a reduction of illiteracy among the peasants. Where this policy is not feasible, plays and songs do their part in arousing sentiment and emotions against the invaders.

International Outlook.

One of the most surprising things encountered on the tour was in the international aspect of the situation—how the Chinese feel towards the western world. A very great recognition of the contribution of foreigner to the Chinese cause is accorded. Perhaps most striking of all things encountered was the presence of Japanese refugees, as official guests at a government reception accorded the delegation at Hankow. These Japanese had refused to live in Japan as long as the invasion of China was going on and were one of the many signs of the realization on the part of the Chinese that it is not the Japanese people but the Japanese militarists who desire and are conducting the ravage of China. Such realization is exemplified best by one of the many banners seen on the tour:

"Down With Japanese Imperialism! Love the Japanese People."

CAMPAIGN FOR S.C.M. FUNDS IS STARTED

Student Christian Movement Meets Today to Hear Address

Today marks the beginning of the Student Christian Movement's annual financial campaign on the campus among the faculty and participating students. This year the drive will be held for 12 days, from October 20 to 31. The objective is $850.

At 1 p.m. today in Strathcona Hall an opening lunch will be held for captains and canvassers. Professor R. B. Y. Scott will give a short talk on the value of the S.C.M. on the campus, while Ivor Williams, past president of the Movement, will say a few words about canvassing. Cards, receipts, and instructions will be distributed to canvassers.

Of the money raised on this campus, the majority will go to support the work of the McGill S.C.M.; various items of expense include program activities, books and magazines, office expense, and salaries. As a part of a world Movement, the McGill S.C.M. pays a small amount of the contributions towards the maintenance of the National secretariat at Toronto and an International office at Geneva.

MEDICAL SERVICE IS PLANNED FOR SUNDAY

Sunday, October 23, will be observed as Medical Sunday at St. George's Church, Dominion Square, when it is hoped a large representation of the medical and associated professions will be present for the morning service at 11 a.m. The President and Council of the Montreal Chirurgical Society will co-operate in this observance when the address at the morning service will be delivered by Dr. H. E. MacDermot, and the lessons read by Dr. J. G. Brown, president of the society, and Dr. W. W. Francis, custodian of the Osler Library, McGill University.

The services will be conducted by the rector, the Ven. Archdeacon A. P. Gower-Rees, who will take for his subject at the evening service at 7 p.m., "Medicine and Spiritual Healing."

MINERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Society Holds First Annual Gathering Today

Students From First and Second Years Asked to Attend

The initial meeting of the Mining and Metallurgical Society of McGill has been called for this afternoon, by Jack Ross, the society's vice-president. The meeting will be held in the Mining and Metallurgy Department situated in the Chemistry Building. This society is affiliated as a student body with the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, by virtue of which the members of the society receive certain privileges.

The aim of this society is to bring together in one group those men in the faculty of engineering interested in mining and metallurgy. It is not a society for those in the third or fourth years only but is open to all men of the faculty. In past years representatives from the first two years have been lacking. This year it is hoped that more men from the first and second years will join the society. There is no cost for membership and all are welcome.

This year it will be the aim of the executive-elect to try to expand the society's programme, which will include speakers who will present talks of interest. As in the past the annual banquet will be held within a couple of months' time. An idea has been suggested which may help to add interest to the meetings. Those students who have written good summer essays which would be of interest, could be asked to present them and discussions of them held.

BOOK EXCHANGE

The Book Exchange will be open today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. This will positively be the last time that students will be able to buy books and will also be the last day for payouts this session.

CAMERA CLICKERS TO ORGANIZE NEW GROUP

The organization meeting of the newly-formed McGill Camera Club is scheduled for today at 5 p.m. in Room 37 of the Engineering Building.

All students interested in any form of the photographic art are eligible for membership in this new addition to McGill's hobby clubs, the aim of which is to offer aid to all camera-addicts on the campus, from the beginner to the advanced amateur.

"There is a definite need for a camera club at McGill," declared Barney Smith, Campus Life Editor of the Annual, "At present there is no means by which the camera fiends can get together to discuss their problems and triumphs." "Several interesting features have already been arranged, including talks and print criticisms by some of the most prominent local photographer. We also hope to arrange a Campus Life Contest and an Exhibition."

FREEDOM TOPIC OF DISCUSSION

Philosophical Society to Hear Howard Rhys

Meeting Tonight in Strathcona Hall Committee Room

Howard Rhys will lead the discussion of "Freedom" at the first open meeting of the Philosophical Society tonight at 8.15 p.m. in the Committee Room of Strathcona Hall. Rhys is taking Honours in Philosophy and is a senior in Arts. "Is Freedom the Absence of Restraint?" is the question he will first introduce in a short talk. The floor will then be open to discussion by all present and the problem will be viewed from different angles.

The nature of Freedom has been chosen by the executive because it is one of vital importance in Philosophy. It is interesting in its present-day aspects in science and in philosophy and has been prominent among the Hindus and the Greek philosophers as well as the moderns.

Predestination, determinism, and free will are problems which enter into the metaphysical side of this question, and the executive states that these will probably touch in tonight's discussion together with the problems of political freedom.

In introducing the subject this will not be the first time Rhys has spoken before the Philosophical Society. Last year he upheld one side of the argument whether the execution of Socrates was justified.

CASTING CONTINUES

Casting for "French Without Tears" will continue tomorrow in the Players' Clubroom, located in the basement of the McGill Union. The following characters constitute the complete cast of the play:

Male—Kenneth, about twenty, good-looking in a vacuous way. Quiet and rather insignificant. Brian, twenty-three or four, large, thick-set and red-faced. Good-natured and blustering. Hearty voice.

Ailan, twenty-three, dark and saturnine. Carefully dressed. Slightly sarcastic in manner. Monsieur Malingot, a bull-voiced French instructor of ferocious aspect. About 60.

Lt. Commander Rogers, a British naval officer of about 35. Very neat, rather solemn, small and dark. Kit, twenty-two, fair and good-looking. Rather innocent and quite idealistic.

Lord Heybrook, a fourteen-year-old boy, fresh-faced and very youthful.

Female: Marianne, a middle-aged and bustling French cook.

Diana, a girl of twenty, very lovely, with an emphasized male-acquiring instinct. Poised, self-assured and completely selfish. Jacqueline, about twenty-five or six, not unattractive, but nothing in looks to compare with Diana. Speaks with a slight French accent. A nice girl.

PRESIDENT OF DEBATING UNION RESIGNS OFFICE

Morton Godine, Elected Last March, Relinquishes Post

RULE OF CONSTITUTION

President of Debating Union Society Must Be Undergraduate

Morton Godine, elected President of the McGill Debating Union Society last March, handed in his resignation as head of that body yesterday. According to the Constitution of the Debating Union Society, the President must be an undergraduate. Though an undergraduate at the time of his election Godine is now a graduate student, having received his Arts degree last spring. At present he has a fellowship in Political Science.

Nominations Open.

Nominations are being called for to fill the vacant office. These must be signed by fifteen members of the Students' Society. All members of the Students' Society are eligible to vote. Voting will take place at a meeting of the Debating Union Society which will be held on Nov. 2. Nominations must be in by Oct. 27.

Coming activities of the Society will be a Mock Parliament on November 3, and an International Debate on November 17. Sylvia Grove, winner of the recent Bovey Shield contest, will be one of the party leaders at the Mock Parliament. The International Debate will be between a visiting Australian team and a team from the McGill Society. Topics and other details will be announced shortly.

I.V.C.F. LUNCHEON

L. C. Thomas, Ottawa Barrister Will Be Speaker

Mr. Leonard C. Thomas, Barrister, of Ottawa, will be the speaker at a luncheon meeting in the Grill Room of the Union at 1 p.m. today.

Mr. Thomas, after having graduated from Osgoode Hall, Toronto, with high honors, took up his practice in Ottawa, where is now a prominent solicitor. At present he is the senior partner of the firm of Thomas & Kennedy.

Besides being a well-known lawyer in the Capital city, Mr. Thomas is actively engaged in Christian work there and throughout Canada.

All students are invited to attend this luncheon, and the meeting will close promptly at 1.55 p.m. in order that students who have lectures may return on time.

FOOTBALL DANCE

McGill and Queen's fans will mingle together in the Mount Royal ballroom after Saturday's game and winners and losers will celebrate or console themselves to the music of Blake Sewell's band.

Strictly a football dance, it will also be formal or informal as you please for dress and plain suit will both be in fashion. It will begin at nine o'clock; tickets, one dollar, may be obtained at the Union. It is expected that a large number of McGill students will attend the "football hop," which is sponsored by Queen's.

RESIDENCE ELECTIONS

E. Haley was elected President of Douglas Hall House Committee in an election held at the residence this week. Other candidates for the office were C. E. Evans, Dr. W. C. Gibson and J. M. McDonald. Nominations for Secretary and members of Committee must be in by October 22 and elections will be held next week.

C.U.P. PLANS LINK BETWEEN TWO GAMES

An experiment will take place at the McGill-Queen's game on Saturday afternoon, October 22, when football fans in Molson stadium will have the opportunity to listen in to bulletins on the Varsity-Western game.

While McGill Redmen will be passing the ball, another important game will be taking place between Western and Varsity in London, Ontario. Since both teams are strong rivals of McGill, this game should be of particular interest to McGill.

Taking this fact into consideration, the Canadian University Press, a nation-wide co-operative news service composed of 14 college papers throughout the Dominion, will have a direct wire linking the Stadiums in London and Montreal and will give brief summaries dispatched by a special correspondent. These dispatches will be announced over the Molson Stadium amplifier during the quarter and half-time intervals.

FROSH GATHER MONDAY NIGHT

Freshettes to Present Original Floor Show

Dutch Treat Lends Novel Note to Gathering

The class of '42 will unite for the major frosh function—the annual Freshman-Freshette dinner and dance to be held on Monday, October 24, at 6.30 p.m.

The Women's Union will act hostess to the Freshettes at their banquet in the Union Grill Room. Freshettes will attend this function unescorted. The program will not consist merely of dinner but the committee promises a floor-show arranged by the freshettes themselves. The talent is to include songs by Irene Lawes, Marjorie Townsend, and Pat Neilson; impersonations by Nancy Gilmour; and recitations by Eleanor Laing. A surprise in the form of a tap dance will be presented by a talented freshette. The Grill Room will be decorated especially for the occasion and the gathering will be under the chairmanship of the president of Arts 1 who will be elected today.

The Freshmen, too, will enjoy their own banquet in the Union Cafeteria starting at 6.30 p.m. Neville Wykes, president of the Arts Undergraduate Society, has promised to say a few words to the boys. One of the features of the evening will be a program of Community singing which will be led by Stuart Reid of the Glee Club.

Tickets for the dinners may be obtained from class representatives only.

Special Daily on Saturday.

No Daily will be issued tomorrow, when lectures are cancelled. However, a special Sports Edition will be published Saturday morning to give a full report on the Intercollegiate Track Meet and the latest news on the Queen's-McGill football game.

EMPIRE GAMES STARS ENTERED IN TRACK MEET

Intercollegiate Competition at Molson Stadium Tomorrow

VARSITY BLUES DEFEND

McGill Fields Strong Team—Records Are Bound to Topple

By HORKY.

What may turn out to be the greatest and most spectacular meet in the history of Intercollegiate track and field competition is scheduled to take place tomorrow afternoon at Molson Stadium when five colleges will send an aggregate of 68 entries into competition for the Intercollegiate crown now held by Toronto Varsity.

The full program of events will be found on Page four.

Headed by a brilliant array of British Empire Games stars, the meet tomorrow has a lure never before experienced in Intercollegiate sports. Numerically paced by McGill and Varsity who will enter a maximum of 10 athletes, Queen's, Western and McMaster seek also individual and aggregate honors that Varsity Blue Boys will defend. The opening events are scheduled to get under way at 1 p.m. with the pole vault and discus competition, while around 1.30 p.m. the opening gun will be fired for the sprints.

Canadian Stars

Five members of Canada's latest British Empire Games team will be in action. Johnny Loaring wearing Western purple, Wallace and Harold Brown, Varsity twin power-houses, Bill Fritz and Jim Courtwright of Queen's are the quintet counted upon to head a wild assault in Canadian intercollegiate records. McGill boasts no Empire Games stars, but are fielding a team led by Captain Clarry Frankton that possesses power, more power than that which represented the Red and White last year. Frankton will be defending his three mile crown, while Ronald Peck will also attempt to retain his high jump title for McGill. These are the only firsts that the experts see for McGill, but who will depend upon second, third and fourth places in the events to pile up a winning margin.

Loaring holds the Intercollegiate 440 yard title, and was the winner of the 400 metre hurdles at Sydney last spring. He is entered in both hurdles events and the event in which he holds the record. The Brown twins are rather versatile. Both have jumped 24 feet, with Harold crossing up his brother Wallace to win the Games championship in this event. Harold is also a sprinter and javelin thrower. Wallace usually places first in the broad jump, puts the shot and throws the discus.

Queen's Luminaries.

Queen's luminaries, Fritz and Courtwright have etched their names in Canada's hall of fame. Fritz is rated as Canada's best short distance sprinter, and returns to his alma mater after a sojourn in Australia and Europe. Fritz chased the great Geoffrey Brown of England to a new world quarter-mile record this summer. Courtwright is

Accepting the Isms

EVERY student at McGill is perfectly free to hold any opinions he may wish. He is allowed to profess Atheism, Fascism, Communism; no one will make him recant or boil him in oil. But freedom always implies a responsibility. Here it means that students who are given this freedom are expected to use it carefully.

From time to time we find students loudly proclaiming their radical views. Often this springs from a desire to be considered different; sometimes it shows more sincerity than prudence.

It seems to be plain common sense that no one should accept an opinion, especially a radical one that may do much harm, unless he is fully qualified to understand its meaning. And very few students are so qualified. It is not wisdom to accept views recklessly, merely because they look exciting.

It is true that a period of scepticism is a necessary condition for forming any matured thoughts of one's own. But it is not being sceptical to jump to the other side of the camp. Everything may be tasted, but not swallowed.

Therefore we make an appeal to students to be careful and circumspect in considering any and all radical doctrines. An abuse of freedom would not only be a discredit to the university, but it would close the door on that progress which is our objective.

Guest Editors

LESS than a year ago, the Canadian University Press was organized by a group of far-sighted college editors from papers throughout the country. One of the purposes of the C.U.P. was to unify college journalism and to abolish sectionalism.

To carry out the plan of acquainting college editors with co-workers in the C.U.P., an exchange system was inaugurated last winter. Toronto, Kingston, Montreal and other eastern cities were linked by a firm bond when the heads of The Varsity, the Queen's Journal and the McGill Daily journeyed from campus to campus. Success of this unique idea paved the way for what may now become an annual feature of the C.U.P.

Thus the Daily will welcome A. C. Forrest, editor of The Varsity when he arrives tonight from Toronto. Mr. Forrest will be guest editor of the next issue of the Daily and will take charge of the editorial column and the paper in general.

The Engineers want the co-operation of the co-eds in urging the construction by the Engineers themselves of a new path along the short-cut to R.V.C. via the Physics Building. They suggest a pavement of concrete blocks. In our opinion, they have only to put their heads together and the job is done.

THEATRE

"STORM IN A TEACUP." By James Bridie. Produced by the M.R.T. Victoria Hall, October 18-22.

"Storm In A Teacup," a comedy by James Bridie, which opened the M.R.T. season is neither very much above the M.R.T. standard of comedy nor very much below it. Thematically, however, it possesses the merit of being more important than most of its M.R.T. predecessors. The importance of maintaining the rights of the individual in the face of oppression cannot be doubted, especially if one is a resident of our own little province. Unfortunately, Mr. Bridie chose to dramatize his theme by selecting the most trivial manifestation that oppression could possibly make, thereby negating his worthy theme completely.

The Story.
One of the protagonists of the play is the Provost of the small Scottish town of Baikie, a thoroughly unpleasant man with political ambitions, who poses as a nationalist and talks as if he had read and believed every word of Hitler's "Mein Kampf." Here is a thoroughly dangerous man, in whose political power is used solely for self-advancement. Yet, Mr. Bridie, showing a lack of imagination and a deficient sense of reality, illustrates how oppressive this type of man can be merely by his refusal to show any leniency to a poor Irish woman whose pup Patsy has been confiscated and is to be put to death because of her inability to pay for the licence. A young idealistic reporter takes up the cudgels in behalf of Patsy, in the name of freedom, mind you, and writes an article exposing the Provost on the eve of the election, which arouses the ridicule and anger of the townsfolk and thus ruins the Provost's political chances. In addition, the latter loses his pretty, young wife to the reporter. The townsfolk raise a subscription for the defence of poor Patsy, thus enriching Mrs. Flanagan, the dog is returned to her by means of a theft, and the play culminates in a somewhat irrelevant third act where the young reporter is charged with the said theft.

The play leaves you with the impression that jolly old oppression is not such terribly menacing thing after all, and that this particular political dragon can be vanquished with comparative ease. This being the case, the playwright defeats himself in the end.

Effective Performances.
Competent but not particularly meritorious acting did not add appreciably to whatever humor and satiric force there may have been lurking in Mr. Bridie's play. Ailsa Hands, as the Provost's lovely young wife, gave the most effective performance. She was charming and natural at all times. Martha Allan's Mrs. Flanagan was a technically sound portrayal, with much in it that deserves praise, but was marred by a lack of vitality, a certain degree of inconsistency, and Mrs. Allan's unfortunate and wholly unjustifiable predisposition to steal scenes. This was most noticeable in the court scene. Surely it is unnecessary for me to point out to an actress of Miss Allan's experience and ability how wrong this is artistically. John Ready, as the Provost, appeared to be too conscious of the fact that there was an audience in the hall. Cecil Nichol was very effective as the reporter and turned in a smooth performance.

Criticism.
Unfortunately, slipshod direction, evident in arbitrary movement and excessive playing up to the audience, did not aid the actors as much as Cecil West's excellent setting.

It may be that in my particular interpretation of Bridie's play I am attributing undue importance to it, and that the play pretends to be no more than a satire on small town politics and politicians. One might be led to such a conclusion from the apparent irrelevancy of the third act. If this be true, then "Storm In A Teacup" is even poorer than I have made it out to be, for it is very ineffective satire. . . . at least, so it appears to one who is more familiar with the American political arena. If Bridie's play is intended to be a blend of both elements, then the structural weakness of the play indicates the playwright's inability to handle his theme.

To those who may think that my estimation of this M.R.T. production is unduly critical, I can only say that my standards of theatre are not the M.R.T. standards, nor will they ever be. I still maintain that the M.R.T. can do much finer work and meet with even greater success than they have with their present policy of production. However, if for some unaccountable reason, you have found particular enjoyment in the typical M.R.T. production of the past few seasons, go to see "Storm In A Teacup." If you haven't, go to bed early this week.

MUSIC

LES CONCERTS SYMPHONIQUES.
Playing in the Forum after a long, successful series of a-fresco summer appearances, the orchestra of Les Concerts Symphoniques, girding for the winter season's trials, finally took fresh stock of itself and its audience—on Tuesday evening. That both were found in excellent good health no one could deny. Orchestral tone in both woodwind and brass choirs (and especially in the horns) has glowingly improved, and the players seem to have grown artistically since the out-of-season activities. And as for the audience, the fact that some four hundred McGill Students were among the thousands who wedged themselves into the Forum's penitential seats argues a splendid and abiding revival of interest.

M. Rosario Bourdon, who conducted, is clearly a person sensitive to the value of restraint; it was that quality which distinguished his performance of Tchaikowsky's Fifth Symphony. In giving no exaggerated force to the many emotional crisis which dot the work, and in judiciously calculating its logical climax, he managed to preserve the shapeliness of the whole, even though delicate parts of the waltz lost themselves somewhere between the platform, and the ceiling girders of the building.

Following the intermission, the orchestra gave a representative, but somewhat unenthusiastic account of Beethoven's great dramatic overture, the divine "Leonora" No. 3, while, despite its numbering, was the second version Beethoven made of the prelude to his only opera, "Fidelio." By way of compensation, this was followed by an excellent performance of the "Pavane pour une Infante Defunte" by Ravel. The work is a remarkable phenomenon in that it represents one of the composer's very first experiments in orchestral writing, and yet shares to an unusual degree in almost everything characteristic of his later work. There is the eternal influence of the dance, the preoccupation with warm Spanish rhythms that flavoured all his art. There is a decisiveness and clarity of orchestration, a touching concord of horns and flutes, harps and muted strings that made nearly everything Ravel ever wrote a kind of bibelot in sound.

To round out the concert, M. Bourdon offered his audience two sure-fire concert standbys, the genial overture to Ermanno Wolf Ferrari's one act intermezzo, "The Secret of Suzanne," and Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries." It being the incontestable right of "pop" audiences to demand an encore, this Tuesday's audience did, recalling the conductor until he played Chabrier's "Espana." An ovation for the conductor followed; if the shades of departed hockey heroes haunt the Forum, they must have been disturbed.

The Bookshelf

CLOUDY TROPHY, by Leon Daudet; William Morrow & Co., 1938; pp 268; price $2.50.

It is a refreshing phenomenon to see a member of the family of a famous man writing the biography of his illustrious ancestor with so much candour and objectivity as does Leon Daudet. Being the grandson of Victor Hugo, Mr. Daudet has chosen the tempestuous years of that author's life, and has made of that period an authentic and absorbing novel. With a perspicacity rarely found in biographers, Leon Daudet has decided to treat the life of Victor Hugo from the point of view of that great man's romantic life. He has therefore titled the book "The Romance of Victor Hugo."

The story of the author's life is taken up at his twenty-ninth birthday, when he was already famous in a number of fields of literary endeavour. At this point, Mr. Daudet points out, an event of the first magnitude occurs—Hugo's wife, Adele, is found to be unfaithful to him. The sensitive nature of the great man is revolted by the thought that the woman whom he has loved for so long had dared to desert him for the affections of a deformed critic, Sainte-Beuve. He becomes embittered and dissolute. Women, of all types and descriptions, come to play an important part in the daily and nightly life of the now-disillusioned and outraged husband. His age is hurt and he finds that eroticism is the only outlet for the pent-up energy of his Olympian anger.

At the deepest point of his despair Hugo meets, and falls in love with, Juliette Drouet. This woman, a former model, and rather loose with her favours, becomes henceforth the constant companion of the irate husband. For the next fifty years she rules him with an iron hand sheathed in the glove of her ever-yieldingness. She is portrayed by Mr. Daudet as a very clever woman, who, through her understanding of the all-embracing love of Victor Hugo for Victor Hugo, has succeeded in manoeuvring him into all sorts of situations, and had finally usurped the place of his legal wife, both privately and in public.

In between episodes of this biography the reader is afforded an intimate glimpse at the social and political life of the latter half of the Nineteenth Century. The complacency with which the people of France regard the amorous escapades of Victor Hugo, as contrasted with the Puritanical attitude of the inhabitants of Jersey and Guernsey to the same question, is very clearly and cleverly depicted. We are also afforded a glimpse into the purely egotistical motive which prompted Victor Hugo to align himself on the side of the rebellious elements of the French Republic during the revolution of 1870. His bitter disappointment at not being called to the presidency of the Republic after the defeat of the French armies is vividly illustrated by copious quotations from his poems of the period.

The final stages of the book deals exclusively with the process of the degeneration of so great a mind. The man Hugo is depicted as a dotard who deserves our sympathy. He still thinks that sex is the sole outlet of the mind of a genius, but, unfortunately, he is no longer able to indulge in anything more serious than a flirtation with the occasional servant-girl. His mind, however, remains clear on all other matters. He still thinks and writes as of yore, but the vigour of his youth clashes incongruously with these writings of his old age. His indispensable Juliette, the central figure in this eventful life, has no longer the power to inspire him to the customary lyrical heights, and her death writes the end of the chapter to a life filled with some of the most turbulent love affairs and political campaigns of the past century.

How Music Affects Me

Music! It usually makes me wish I were deaf, and even at the thought of the word I mutter something unpleasant (no matter what). I don't mean all music. Oh no! I just love to listen to Phil Harris or Lloyd Huntley, or even Toscanini. But, for instance, I detest listening to people practising on a horn, or a saxophone, or a trombone—you know what I mean. A fellow in the opposite apartment is learning to play such an instrument, and even as I write he is practising. I can't see him for he hides himself in the corner and I fervently wish he'd lock himself in the cellar, as I can hear him all too clearly. He starts at middle C (at least I think it is) and goes up the scale not even omitting sharps and flats, "boop, boop, boop . . . " until it becomes "beep, beep, beep," then "squeak, squeak," until it fails entirely. Then he begins to come up all over again. He may keep this up for half an hour, as he often does. Every time he does so I make some very uncomplimentary remarks (to myself, as he's bigger than I am) and endeavor to shut out the noise, which, I can assure you, is much worse than the musical practices of the McGill band.

But what's the use! If he stops something else will start, and—it does. My brother turns on the radio and I have to listen to a girl warbling in a most unbecoming voice: "Vieni, Vieni, Vieni . . . " or, anyway, something like that. And when that's finished I'll have to listen to some crooner singing (?) about "How grand you are" or "My Little Yellow Basket" or some equally silly nonsense. I still haven't decided whether I'd rather listen to a horn practice or a Blues Singer, but I know I'd rather not listen to either.

By this time I have conceived a dreadful hate for music and am ready to sit on anyone who mentions the word. The music (?) has taken my mind off my work as you can see, as you can see, and I am becoming more and more involved. After many protests and diplomatic negotiations, and these failing, a little physical persuasion I succeed in getting the radio shut off and I settle down to my work again. Quiet reigns for a minute. Then the little boy next door starts practising on his violin. I honestly don't know which is the worst, listening to someone learning to play the horn or the violin. The violin goes "squeak, squeak" and I throw my pen down and march angrily about the house, grumbling about people who must disturb the neighborhood with music.

Several small boys with a tin pan band come marching down the street and select our front lawn as a parade ground. And to crown it all here comes an organ-grinder. I fust and fust and vent my anger on the chésterfield. In the midst of it all the musical jangle of the telephone bell adds to the din. I snatch up the receiver and rudely shout "Hello" into the 'phone. The voice of a young lady in whom I am very much interested comes sweetly over the wire, and asks me if I wouldn't like to join the bunch who are going for a drive. I reply, "Yes," very politely, and run to get ready, mentally forgiving the musical students and I will probably listen to "Vieni, Vieni" all evening without a sign of displeasure. Indeed I might go as far as to throw a couple of pennies to an organ-grinder, which shows how differently music affects me in different situations.

The German Club.
To the Editor of the McGill Daily:
Sir,—It is not quite fair to have credited a member of the staff with the doings of the German Club. The Club is a student activity and its success is primarily due to the efficiency and great ability of the student-officers, and the fine enthusiasm of the students of German. Continuing the fine tradition of Dr. Graft, the members of the German staff will be very glad to give every support to the German Club.

Sincerely yours,
J. K. BECK.

Letters From Paris
By David R. Fraser

were home awaiting news broadcasts. Trenches were being dug in the parks to be used as air-raid shelters, and sand was distributed around the city to put out fires in case incendiary bombs were used.

Country United.

The Louvre was closed and many of its masterpieces were hurried away to some less vulnerable hiding place. Valuable books were taken in truckloads from the libraries. Women and children were evacuated from the city in large numbers. It was not the same Paris at all!

Just then a grim determination seemed to permeate all France, as young and old alike were summoned under the various mobilization orders. Everyone was aware of the consequences.

Mr. Daladier, who had previously been finding it difficult to consolidate his position of Prime Minister, suddenly found that the opposition had rallied behind him. They all realized that if there was to be a war with Germany it was no time to squabble among themselves.

Population Hilarious.

Pro-English feeling became stronger, and for a time all eyes were focussed on Downing Street. It is astounding how fraternally the French people looked to the initiative of the British Prime Minister. They knew that his diplomatic struggle was theirs and that the destinies of both countries would be painted with the same brush.

Chamberlain was the man of the hour! When pictures of him appeared in news reels, we could almost describe as sentimental the way the theatre audiences in Paris cheered, clapped and shrieked their approval. That seemed to be the one bright thing in a French metropolis that had so recently lost its glamour and gaiety.

As days wore on, the tension increased, until the news of the Munich Four-Power Agreement hit Paris like a bombshell! People crowded the streets laughing and shouting hilariously. Bright lights were again seen on the "boulevards." The whole atmosphere of "gay Paris" seemed gayer than ever, after three weeks of nerve-racking tension.

What Is the Next Step?

Now that the main drama is over, the French look rather portentously on what is to follow. There is a feeling here that the Chamberlain-Hitler peace pact was a splendid thing, but that France was left out in the cold. They seem to think that Hitler succeeded in getting Mr. Chamberlain to sign a pact that will assure Germany that she will not have England to contend with if war should break out in the future. In addition, what would England do now, if war broke out between France and Germany? Britain's hands are tied!

France feels that her position is greatly weakened as she cannot count on Britain to help her to defend the rights of small European countries against the aggression of a great power. One Parisian editor is the only one refusing policies to students as such.

"The hesitancy of other firms," said Mr. MacDonald, "is merely because the so-called teen-aged drivers have statistically the most dangerous record."—(The Varsity.)

FRESHMAN GRID SQUAD HELD TO TIE AT MOLSON

Deadlocked With Loyola for League Leadership

RUSSELL PLAYS WELL

Loyola Strong in Second and Third Periods

By DOUG ARMSTRONG.

The God Pluvius reigned over yesterday's McGill-Loyola junior football tussle, the players and spectators experiencing everything from a mild drizzle to a regular downpour. When the final whistle blew and the mud spattered stalwarts slouched off the field, the score was tied, 11-11, thus leaving the two teams neck and neck for first place honours. So far neither team has been defeated and from all indications there will be a close race for this year's championship.

A strong Loyola supporting section continually urged their team to victory but the McGill cheering section was confined to the players' bench due to the lack of a substantial McGill turnout. A larger Red following in future games might help the McGill Freshman team to retain their title.

Russell Stars.

Stars of the day were Bruce Russell of McGill, who scored his team's two touchdowns in the first quarter, and Pare, of Loyola, who also scored two touchdowns. Besides these prime exponents of the pigskin game, Oumet, McDonald and Reed of McGill, and Asselin and Veilleux of Loyola also showed to good advantage.

The Red squad had things well under control in the first quarter and soon had the game's initial touchdown. It started with Reed throwing a forward to Russell for a gain of about thirty yards. Lloyd Smith bucked the line to bring the ball almost to the Loyola goal and Russell went over for the tally. McGill failed to convert. Near the close of the quarter, Bruce Russell went over once more on an end run. Oumet kicked the convert making the score at the end of the first quarter 11-0 in favour of the Red team.

Loyola Takes Control

In the second quarter the play was reversed and Loyola had the upper hand. Shortly after the commencement of play Loyola completed a forward, followed by a line buck to make yards. After the kick McGill were back to their 15-yard line. When the Loyola team again obtained the ball they made yards to bring them down to McGill's 20. Another buck for yards and the Maroon and White boys were within four yards of the Red goal line. Pare then went over for the touch. Loyola failed to make the convert and the score was 11-5 at half time.

Loyola resumed their domination of the play in the third quarter and pushed down the field to McGill's 30-yard line. Here McDonald of McGill intercepted a forward and things looked a bit brighter for the Red team. But again the Maroon and White squad forged down the field and, after the kick, had McGill back to within seven yards of their goal line. McGill started back up the field but fumbled on the 17-yard line, the ball being recovered by Loyola. After making little gain in the first two downs, Loyola tried a third down buck but failed to make yards, thus giving the ball to McGill on the 10. The next McGill kick was blocked and the opposing team obtained the ball, taking it to the two-yard line. Pare went over for the five points and Asselin kicked the convert, tying the score 11-11 at three-quarter time.

Reds End Strongly.

McGill began to click once more in the fourth quarter. Bruce Russell made a 35 yard run into the Loyola territory and a kick brought the ball to Loyola's six-yard line. A splendid chance to get into the lead was given the Red team but the snap to the kicker went wild behind the Loyola lines. McGill, however, could not get through the line and the kicker recovered the ball and kicked to the 40 yards out from the line. Another chance was given McGill to get a point when a kick went behind the Loyola goal line. Poor tackling enabled the Maroon man to get out

Piggott Stars As Toronto Team Annexes Three Tennis Crowns

McGill Third as Toronto Takes Team Title — Hall and Small Are Doubles Champions — Piggott Wins Singles

By ANDREW GIBB.

Rain yesterday afternoon forced the Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament indoors and at the beautifully laid-out courts of the Indoor Tennis Club, the Intercollegiate doubles championship was decided. The Toronto Varsity team of Hall and Small defeated Derome and Dussault from the University of Montreal, 6-3, 6-3 to make it a clean sweep for the racket wielders from the Queen City. Bill Piggott had previously whipped his teammate Bruce Hall 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 for the singles title and the Toronto team had piled up a total of 18 points to 13 for the University of Montreal and McGill's 8 to take the team championship.

Great things had been expected of the Hall-Piggott game at 10 yesterday morning but Hall took a rather surprisingly one-sided beating. He played well enough for an ordinary game but Piggott was right at the top of his form and it was the opinion of many observers that there are few Canadians who could have beaten him as he was playing yesterday. His smooth mastery of all his strokes topped anything seen here for some time.

Doubles Final.

The doubles final in the afternoon held much more interest. Both teams were rather cautious for the first few games and lobs were much in evidence. Toronto took the first two games, dropped the next pair then ran through three in a row. U. of M. pulled up to 5-3 but on the strength of three service aces and a terrific overhead smash by Hall the Varsity duo took the ninth game and the set.

In the second set both teams began to hit the ball harder and play opened up considerably. Derome was serving well and scored several points with well-placed smashes. He and Dussault quickly opened up a 3-1 lead but the Varsity pair came right back with some smart play at the net by Small and powerful serving by both men that produced a five-game rally and gave them the match.

Richer Extends Piggott.

An unfortunate mistake was made in yesterday's Daily and Bill Pig-gott was credited with a 6-3, 6-1 win over Jean Richer, McGill's class two player. Actually Richer at one time was within one point of defeating the new Intercollegiate champion and only lost a stubbornly-contested match by a score of 6-6, 3-6, 6-6. A very fine performance, indeed, in view of the fact that Piggott is considered to be one of the best of Canada's Intercollegiate tennis players.

Another creditable performance from the McGill standpoint was the fact that Doug Mann and Jack McMartin carried Hall and Small to three sets before losing their doubles match against them.

While waiting for the doubles final to start at the Indoor Tennis Club, Pierre Desautels and Bill Piggott gave the assembled spectators a display of table tennis, but the consensus of opinion was that they should stick to their own game. Incidentally Pierre won, 21-18.

System Satisfactory.

Although he was unable to play in the tournament due to an ankle injury, Stu O'Brien teamed up with Manager Graham Gould to stage a very efficiently run tourney. Both competitors and officials seemed very pleased with the round robin system of playing of the matches as compared with the ordinary tournament system as used previously.

Yesterday's results and the final standings follow. Two games, both bringing together Queen and McGill were cancelled because of the rain but neither could have had any effect on the final standing of the teams.

Results.

Derome and Dussault, U. of M., defeated Mable and Thomson, Queens, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4; Paouet and Gagnon, U. of M., defeated Benson and Bailey, Queen, 6-0, 6-0; Piggott and Snyder, U. of T., defeated Desautels and Snyder, McGill, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3; Hall and Small, U. of T., defeated McMartin and Mann, McGill, 6-2, 6-8, 6-2; Shouter, U. of T., defeated Bailey, Queens, 6-2, 6-3.

New Red Wing Society Described to Women

SKI MEET PLANNED

Basketball, Skiing and High Aggregate Awards Are Presented

The M.W.S.A.A. held its annual meeting in the common room at R.V.C. yesterday afternoon at 3.30 p.m. The anticipated rush in the direction of Royal Victoria College was realized and all the business proceeded smoothly.

The first item on the agenda was the reading of the minutes of the semi-annual meeting held last March. They were respectfully submitted by Emily Irving, the secretary, and adopted and approved. Barbara Brooks then gave the financial report, out of which no further business arose.

Red Wing Society.

Following the financial report the co-eds were introduced to the new Red Wing Society, which is the old Entertainment Committee dressed up with a new name and new uniforms. Margaret Patch, the Chairman for the new society, read the constitution and then proceeded to name the various members of the Red Wings who were appointed this year but will be elected by ballot next year. The members were Mickey Crabtree, Doreen Brown, Mary Gurd, Janet Dye, Florence Lincoln and Allison Lyster. The purpose of this society

JUNIORS SWEEP MAC FIELD DAY

Phil Archer and Jean Smillie Are Individual Stars

Macdonald High School Leads in the Relay

The juniors completely dominated the field as they amassed 70 points in the MacDonald interclass track and field meet yesterday afternoon. Phil Archer was the individual aggregate winner with six firsts to his credit. Rain and the consequent wet track prevented runners from establishing any new records.

Jean Smillie won the women's broad jump and took second in the 50-yard dash to capture top honours among the women entrants. Though the 880-yards and the 3-mile run still remains on the track program, there is no further chance for any class to overhaul the juniors. Agr. '40 outpulled the freshmen in the tug-of-war and won the class relay in interclass competition to collect a total of 10 firsts, five seconds and five thirds. Teachers were second in the class standing with 17 points.

High School Leads.

Macdonald High School led by a good margin in the open half-mile relay to win in 1:45 3-5. In the women's class relay, freshmen broke the tape eight feet ahead of the teachers to come first in that event. In a hard-fought tug-

SWORDPLAY

By Doug and Jack

Ed. Note: The Sports Department has pleasure in introducing "Swordplay," a weekly feature, to its readers. This column is written by Doug Reilly and Jack McNiven, both well-qualified to give information and items of interest about fencing at McGill in particular and the city in general.

McGill football fans will get an introduction to the ancient art of swordplay when the McGill Fencing Club presents Irv. Smith and Jack Herman and guest stars George Tully and Charles Otis of Canada's 1936 Olympic team, during the half time period of the Queen's game.

George Tully is Canada's foremost fencer having won the three Dominion titles for Foil, Sabre and Epee in 1937 and having repeated again in 1938 to perform a feat hitherto unprecedented. Charles Otis has been runner-up in many provincial championships. Both have established fencing clubs in the city, Tully at Westmount "Y" and Otis at Central "Y". Irv. Smith and Jack Herman are members of last year's Intercollegiate team which nosed out Varsity to take the title. They are expected to perform with foil and epee while the other pair will demonstrate sabre play.

It has come to the attention of this columnist that a few of the Frosh around McGill have had, as it were, a secret and suppressed desire to disprove the accepted theory that the pen is mightier than the sword. Well, why not? Each Monday, Wednesday and Friday at five o'clock in the Strathearn School the Fencing Club will welcome anyone interested. Previous experience is unnecessary.

Maitre Blau has finally arrived from France having escaped mobilization by a hair's breadth according to current reports. He is expected to resume coaching duties next week. The "Maitre" has had a coaching career extending for over twenty years and has established a reputation for turning out championship teams. McGill fencers, incidentally, have been winning consistently for the past ten or twelve years. Last year's team not only won the Intercollegiate title but also lifted the Provincial Inter-Club trophies. Last year saw forty or fifty novices turn out to take instruction. That number dwindled somewhat during the year but still a good number of creditable swordsmen were developed and three teams were entered in the city league.

Those unacquainted with fencing activities in Montreal might wonder just what sort of competition they may expect. Montreal is definitely the fencing centre of the Dominion and most of the Dominion Championship honours have been taken by local men despite some strong opposition from Toronto and Winnipeg. The Province of Quebec Fencing Association offers about twelve different competitions for all classes of fencers, during the season, novice tournaments in the three weapons, provincials and Dominion events as well as the regular weekly battles between the men's clubs and the four ladies' organizations. There is certainly no lack of competition with Tully, Otis, Gutterman, Horn, and other titlists.

Non-fencers sometimes have rather vague notions about this sport, some of which are quite humorous. We can assure those timid souls that there is little danger of being skewered to the wall by an unbuttoned blade, although there have been a few accidents caused purely by carelessness about which M. Blau will discourse with expressive French.

RED GRID TEAM PRACTISES FOR THIRD CONTEST

Alex Hamilton Returns to Bolster Lineup

MEET QUEEN'S HERE

Red Squad Ready to Defend Union Lead This Week-End

The big Red machine continued its workouts at Molson Stadium last night with a one hour scrimmage against the Seconds in preparation for its encounter with Queen's here on Saturday. Alec Hamilton, who was unable to take part in the game with Varsity last week due to an attack of flu, returned to the workouts this week and will take part in Saturday's game and aid the Red team in its aerial attack. Eddie Tabah's arm is still greatly swollen, however, and he will not be able to return to the squad for a week.

Bob Keefe showed much improvement in his placement kicking last night and this weak point of the team to date seems to have been overcome. Coach Doug Kerr is rounding his squad into the peak of condition for Saturday's tilt in its attempt to derive its third straight win of the season.

Queen's Boast Strength.

Although Queen's have yet to win a game this season, nevertheless they have a strong team and will be fighting against virtual elimination Saturday afternoon. Starring for the Tricolour are Captain Art Stollery, who is in his fourth season as quarterback on the Senior team; Tuffy Griffiths, who was with last year's championship team, and George Sprague, who is playing his third season in Senior company.

Saturday's halftime entertainment will feature fencing bouts between George Tully and Charles Otis with sabres and between I. Smith and Jack Herman with foil and epee.

Boxing.

Practices will be held at the field house every Monday, Wednesday day and Friday at 5 o'clock. On Tuesday and Thursday practice will be held at the Montreal High School Gym. More boxers are needed, so all prospective novices will be held at the Montreal High hurry and turn out.

COED'S SPORTS ARRANGED FOR COMING SEASON

is to give assistance to any of the campus societies, in any of their activities.

Mrs. Grant, who was present, kindly said a few words to the gathering, showing her approval of the understanding of the M.W.S.A.A.

Many Changes Made.

The managers reports were then read. Lila Redmond, the tennis manager, gave a description of the Intercollegiate matches at Toronto, and told how the interfaculty tournaments were progressing. Mary Ellen Rossiter continued with the Archery report, and this was followed by the basketball report of Mona Robinson. Mona urged the co-eds to turn up in as large numbers as possible to facilitate the new system of Intra-mural Basketball, which simply means that no matter how many girls turn up, teams will be found for those present and everyone will have a chance to play.

Doris Banfill, the badminton manager, then came forth with many new ideas for the coeds in her special field. She mentioned that the hall in R.V.C. will be free several nights a week and stated that tournaments would probably be arranged between the McGill girls and various outside clubs in Montreal. Eleanor Hunter, in making her report on the Hockey for the coming year, stated that all the players on the winning team would be given a red "H."

Plan Ski Meet.

Jean Percy, the Ski manager, told the coeds of the renewed activities of the skiers and voiced the hope that this year an Intercollegiate Ski Meet would be held. Invitations have already been sent to Radcliff, Vassar, Mt. Holyoke, Varsity, Wellesley and Smith.

At the conclusion of the manager's reports it was announced that Irene Smith had been appointed ping-pong manager, and that tournaments will be played when the game gets well under way.

Amendments Passed

President Peggy Johannesen then read two proposals which are deemed necessary to enlarge the grant given to the M.W.S.A.A. to carry on its growing activities; Miss Heriott of the Department of Physical Education gave full approval to the proposals in the name of her department. The vote was carried unanimously that these proposals were worth further consideration.

Two amendments to the constitution were then discussed.

(1) That article 5 of the constitution which read "the president and treasurer shall be elected from the faculties of Arts or Commerce" be changed to read "Arts, Science or Commerce."

(2) That Article 10 of the constitution which reads "A quorum shall be 100" be changed to read "a quorum shall be 50." These amendments were passed by a two-thirds majority of a quorum of a hundred.

Following the passing of the amendments, Miss Slack presented the awards, for Basketball, Skiing, and the highest number of points in the combined activities in the Physical Education Department and the M.W.S.A.A. The meeting was then adjourned and tea was served.

gestures. It is a game at which the ladies with their deceptive natures excel, and sufficiently strenuous and painful for the most ferocious natures, in that lovely red welts can be raised by sabre play. It combines brain work and foot work deception and co-ordination, speed and endurance, grace and strength. The exhibition during the McGill-Queen's game should give some indication of what we mean.

MCGILL HOSTS TO CRACK SPIKE STARS

British Empire javelin champion, and holder of the Intercollegiate record in this event. He also won the shot put last year and placed second in the discus.

Another bright Toronto light is the Intercollegiate sprint champion, Gordie McHenry, who will be tested to the utmost of his ability by Fritz and Patterson, the latter a Western threat. Trusser, their pole vault champion, is back.

Other athletes of note who are shaded by the brilliance of the above-mentioned are Paul, Queen's high-jumper and pole-vaulter; Sterling of Queen's, who holds the Dominion interscholastic shot-put record, and Dingwall, a quarter-miler, also from Queen's. Lyle Fleming of Western is back after the half-mile crown which he won two years ago. Fleming and Ferris were members of the schoolboy team that went to Australia with Dr. Lamb a few years ago.

McMaster Threats.

Although never prominently mentioned but always distinct threats are the boys from McMaster. Ken McAdam, their big gun, will be here in the field events. Boyd, a sprinter and Intercollegiate champion, is with them. Also, a bit of irony. The best schoolboy quarter in Quebec last year is at McMaster and goes under the name of Wrath.

The McGill team sports break a precedent this year. Two freshmen are included on the team. This has never happened for several years. The lads are Cooper in the pole-vault and Falls in the sprints. McGill's sprint hopes will be carried by Vaughan Mason, the New Jersey flash who is entered in 220 and 440 events. Moskowitz, Purdie and Bryant are entered in the hurdles, while Borsman, Cowan and Cooke will look after the middle distances. Burke, a lad from Holy Cross, is McGill's chief threat in the broad jump; while Owen, Hughes, Kissane form the field events array. Owen and Hughes are up from last year's Intermediate team.

Favored by fine weather, the meet will be one of the outstanding track and field displays ever to be held in Montreal.
